WITH WIFE PAYS VISIT TO AMERICA

Sir Edgar Speyer and wife, snapped on arrival at New York.

Sir Edgar Speyer, the former British privy councillor, and his wife arrived in New York a few days ago for a brief holiday in America. Sir Edgar is a native of Frankfurt-on-the-Main, Germany, and is the head of the banking house of Speyer in London, a branch of the Speyer house established by the elder Speyer in the German city where the former British privy councillor was born. He recently resigned this honorary office because of criticisms based upon the fact of his German origin. He is a brother of James Speyer, head of the American banking house of Speyer.

IS READY TO SEND
NOTE TO GERMANY;
BRYAN CALLED IN

Certain Changes in Phraseology Responsible for Delay in Transmission—Wilson Confers With Secretary.

Washington, June 7.—The American note to Germany concerning the sinking of the Lusitania virtually was ready today for transmission to Berlin. President Wilson worked until a late hour to complete the phraseology. The note is to be a vigorous reiteration of previous demands that Germany exercise the right of visit and search before attacking an armed merchant ship.

The delay in forwarding the note was to enable the president to so phrase it that there could be no room for doubt of further argument concerning the attitude of the United States.

Bryan Confers With Wilson. Secretary Bryan had a conference with President Wilson at noon today. He is understood to have gone over the final draft of the German note with him. After leaving the president Mr. Bryan refused to say whether the president had given him the note for transmission to Berlin and would not discuss it in any way.

No Report on Nebraska. Ambassador Gerard reported today that no report on the torpedoing of the American steamer Nebraska, but was conducting an investigation.

Ambassador Gerard's message was an answer to the state department inquiry whether any report had been received from German sources. Meanwhile the department awaits also a full report of the inquiry by the American naval attaché, sent to Liverpool from London.

Bagdad Threatened. Sir Percy Cox at the head of strong naval and military forces obtained a foothold at Amara on the Tigris river, half way from the head of the Persian Gulf to the city of Bagdad. The Anglo-Indian began operations in his field, have captured many prisoners as well as guns and ammunition, and have taken gunboats, steamers and other vessels. It is said the Turkish army opposed to the advance, but that it is doubtful if it will be able to offer serious resistance to a further British advance in Mesopotamia.

Turks Claim Success. Constantinople, June 6, via London. The allied troops in the Gallipoli peninsula have been driven back, and heavy losses according to an official statement issued today by the British war office, which says: "The British have been successful in the Gallipoli campaign, but our right wing counter-attacking. The enemy was driven back in disorder into their old position after suffering heavy losses."

British Steamship Escapes Three Attacks From Land and Water. (By Associated Press.) Rotterdam, June 7.—After being attacked in succession by a Zeppelin, a submarine, and a German aeroplane, the Cork Steamship company's ship, Leinster, has reached this port safely from Liverpool.

There were more thrills packed into this short voyage than ever before, declared the captain of the ship. "The first part of the trip was uneventful, but as we neared the Dutch coast things began to happen. First came a Zeppelin, which attacked us before daybreak one morning, dropping twenty or thirty bombs. Considerable damage was done to the ship, but we were lucky not to be hit."

Soon after sun-up, having lost the Zeppelin in the haze, we sighted a submarine half a mile away. She gave chase, but we sent every man to the deck and steered a zigzag course, so that the submarine quit the pursuit after half an hour's hard work.

There was a little later in the same day that an aeroplane favored us. She circled overhead several times and dropped two bombs, but her ammunition was evidently scarce, and she didn't stay with us long. Neither bomb came close to us."

London, June 7.—A dispatch received here from Aberdeen says that the British steamer Star of the West has been sunk by a German submarine. A trawler brought the crew into Aberdeen.

Liverpool Steamer Sunk. The British steamer Sunlight of Liverpool was sunk by a German submarine. The crew of the vessel has been taken into Queenstown.

The captain and crew arrived at Queenstown today. They say they were given time to take to their boats before the vessel was sunk by shell fire from the submarine. The Sunlight left Santo Domingo, May 1, for Clyde.

The trawler Dromio of Hull also has been sent to the bottom by a submarine. Five members of the crew were rescued, but four members were killed by the shell fire of the underwater boat.

German Transports Sunk. The naval engagement off the entrance to the Gulf of Riga resulted in the sinking of several German transports and one large vessel not named, says a Petrograd correspondent of the Times. The Russians lost one auxiliary ship.

It is surmised, the correspondent says, that the majority of the German ships hitherto concentrated at Kiel, came out into the Baltic, but the battle squadron apparently was not engaged. It is believed in Petrograd that the Germans will repeat their attempt to land troops on the Russian coast.

To Pay for Greek Ship. Athens, via London, June 7.—The German government has admitted the responsibility of the German submarine commander of the German submarine who on April 18, torpedoed and sunk the Greek steamer Epirion, in the North sea. STARVING MEXICANS
STORM CAPITAL IN DEMAND FOR CORN

National Convention Besieged by Men and Women Seeking Food.

Mexico City, June 7.—For the last three days the sessions of the so-called national convention in the chamber of deputies have been the scene of wild disorder. Not only the galleries, but at times the floor and speakers' tribune is crowded with hordes of hungry men, women and children. The shout of "We want corn" has been kept up all day long.

The Red Cross have been kept busy carrying off women and children, and in some cases old men, crushed or overcome by these manifestations.

Ten thousand gathered outside the chamber today and nearly 300 were carried off on stretchers. Deputies Garcia, appeared before the convention delegates and a portion of the mob to tell them that the treasury was empty, and the fields laid to waste by bayonettes and even the show of bayonettes and firing of the soldiers over the heads of the mob have not checked their violent and pitiful demand for food.

New Dreadnaught Ships Safely Into Ocean at New York Navy Yards Today.—Is Thirty-ninth Battleship.

Washington, June 7.—The thirty-ninth battleship built for the American navy since 1892 will take the water June 19 next when the super-dreadnaught Arizona slips from the ways at the New York Navy Yard. Compared to the first American battleship, the Indiana, launched in 1893, the Arizona will be nearly twice as long, half again as wide and of three times as great displacement.

Against the Indiana's four 12-inch guns and eight 8-inch, the Arizona will carry twelve 14-inch and twenty-two 6-inch rifles, the same armament as her sister ship, the Pennsylvania, recently launched at Newport News.

In addition to the great size of the new ship's main battery, the guns will displace of the Indiana's thirteen-inch guns, identical with those aboard the famous old Oregon, which played their part in the battle of Santiago. With the fourteen guns of the Arizona in her turret, the Oregon could have halted any one of the fleeing Spanish ships almost without leaving her station. The Arizona's guns have a range, even at the low elevation of the turret, of about fifteen miles or more, against eight or nine miles for the old thirteen-inch.

The Arizona will be the fourth battleship built by the United States in its own navy yard at New York. The others were the Connecticut, the dreadnaught Florida and the super-dreadnaught Texas, at present the largest of the American fighting craft. Against the New York's displacement of 17,000 tons, however, the Arizona will displace only 9,100 tons, and will measure 500 feet in length and 91 feet 6 inches in width. She will mount twelve 14-inch guns to the ten 14's carried by the Texas and they will be carried three to a turret as aboard the Pennsylvania.

Immediately upon the launching of the Arizona the keel of the navy department's greatest experiment in battleship construction, the electrically driven super-dreadnaught Connecticut, will be laid at the New York yard. She will be nearly a thousand tons heavier than the Arizona although carrying the same equipment and armament of guns; her is expected to develop greater speed than the 21 knots desired of the Arizona.

Comparing the most recent government battleship to the first, the Connecticut, the navy officials point to the fact that although the Arizona has twelve guns to the Connecticut's four and displaces 15,400 tons more, she will carry only 915 men against the 1,012 needed to handle the smaller ship. This is due to the improvement in mechanical appliances for handling the guns in the last decade and also to the fact that oil has been substituted for coal as fuel, decreasing the necessary fireman force, and that only two sizes of guns compose her armament against the four sizes aboard the Connecticut. The result is a reduction in ammunition handling forces.

The Arizona will be sponsored by Miss Esther Ross of Preston, Arizona, nominated by Governor Hunt of Arizona. As she looks in the ship will have cost the government $7,250,000. An even greater sum will go for her guns and armor and other equipment and when she goes into commission her cost to the country will have reached the huge total of $13,000,000 or more. This cost represents a reduction of nearly $500,000 in guns and armor, according to the navy department, under the prices paid for the Pennsylvania's offensive and defensive equipment. It was in dealing with contracts for the Arizona's armor that Secretary Danahy demanded competitive bidding and succeeded in effecting the saving.

WILDING, TENNIS PLAYER, KILLED WHILE WATCHING ENEMY'S ARTILLERY FIRE. (By Associated Press.) London, June 7.—According to a letter received here Anthony Wilding, the lawn tennis champion, who was killed on May 11, was in charge of a motor machine gun in the French front. He had left his gun in a safe place and was watching the effect of the enemy's artillery fire from a reserve trench when a shell fell close to him and caused instant death.

TURK AND AUSTRALIAN HAVE HAND TO HAND BATTLE ON CLIFF'S EDGE. (By Associated Press.) Cairo, June 7.—A tale that outdoes a moving picture melodrama is told here by a wounded Australian officer, now in a hospital at Cairo, who met a Turk in a hand to hand struggle on a cliff's edge.

The cliff where the two foemen met was at Saraban. Clenching their fists, they knocked the rifles from each other's grips. Without attempting to regain his weapon, the Australian flew at the Turk bare-handed. The Turk was a good wrestler, each tried to throw the other over the cliff's edge into the sea. They both went.

The struggle continued in sea, where the Australian managed to get a choke hold on the Turk's neck and keep his head under the water until drowned.

WANT ANNUAL VISIT

Hope Is Expressed That Cooking Expert May Arrange to Lecture Here for a Week Next Year.

(By Mrs. Abbie Helms.)
At the Saturday afternoon session of the cooking school the morning lesson on frying was repeated to a large audience of ladies. The carving set given by the Fleischmann company was awarded to Rosina E. Blanchard, 745 Milton avenue, and the sack of Jersey Lily flour donated by C. W. Schwartz, 215 Jefferson avenue.
At the informal reception, given Miss Peet after the lesson, the hope was expressed unanimously by the ladies present that the affair might be made an annual event and that Miss Peet might give another course of lessons next year. A first ward nation with four grown daughters, said that "she would so like to have her girls hear the lectures. If she comes another year, we'll just drop everything and go every day," she said.

A prominent physician's wife made the remark that "she hadn't eaten any fried food for years but that she thought she could really enjoy Miss Peet's mother's frying." An ex-school teacher with the same thorough methods that marked her successful career in teaching, has compiled a copious series of notes and has bought the largest size of frying kettle to be obtained. With these two things she is working her way carefully and painstakingly through the entire course of lessons.

A lady just home from the Battle Creek sanitarium said that "they did not serve many fried foods there, but that they did were cooked by Miss Peet's mother." A young woman who looked at first sight like a school girl, when introduced to Miss Peet said "she was a young married housekeeper and had come every day because she was trying to learn." And Miss Peet answered that she was very glad to be of help, as she was just the kind that she liked to teach. She said that the gray-haired woman who has been one of the "steadies" came to Miss Peet and said to her, "I have baked and cooked all my life, in a home, mostly, and yet I have learned more at these lessons than I ever knew before, put it altogether. Everyone has been so pleased with Miss Peet, not only for her knowledge, but for her kind and cheerful way of teaching, that I have learned more at these lessons than I ever knew before, put it altogether. Everyone has been so pleased with Miss Peet, not only for her knowledge, but for her kind and cheerful way of teaching, that I have learned more at these lessons than I ever knew before, put it altogether."

Another suggestion has been made that it would well repay the dealers in household appliances such as Miss Peet uses, to have a line of them in various styles on display in the hall where she works. The question was constantly asked of Miss Peet, where could such an article be procured and how much would it cost. There is no doubt that with proper effort a good many orders could be secured in that way. As to there was much discussion of the different kinds of flour best suited for different purposes. If a few of the best known brands of flour used in this section had been on display at this time Miss Peet would have been able to show the best points of each. Altogether the course of lessons has been a great success and thanks are certainly due to the Gazette for bringing such an educational opportunity to the ladies of Janesville. The course of lessons to be given at Madison during the present week, and it is to be hoped that Miss Peet and her sister, Miss Downing, will have large and enthusiastic audiences at every one of their sessions while there.

SHERIFF IS EXPECTING WAGES OF MISS BURGART

Sheriff Chamberlain is daily expecting the wages due to the county from C. S. Whipple for the services of Miss Agnes Burgart, who is serving an eleven months' commitment law term at the Rock county insane asylum and now farm. No payment has been made yet of the wages of three dollars a week, as contained in the contract made for the young lady, who was convicted of obtaining money under false pretenses.

Last week a youthful "film salesman" was in Janesville, seeking to see Miss Burgart, but before he learned who she had been committed to the good looking stranger was subject to an investigation of the authorities. What was learned the police refused to reveal.

Superior inquiries are being received at the county jail from other cities, principally from California, requesting for descriptions of the young lady and asking when her sentence will be completed here.

The tournament will start about noon and end late in the afternoon. A good gallery is expected to witness the shoot in case of pleasant weather.

STUDENTS TO ATTEND GENEVA CONFERENCE

Milton and Beloit Colleges Plan Sending Delegations to Big Meeting at Lake Next Week.

Students at Milton and Beloit colleges are at work forming delegations to go to Lake Geneva next week, to attend the students' conference, which meeting is held annually, and is attended by between eight hundred and a thousand college male students in the middle west.

The conference is strictly confined to college students, and is conducted for ten days. It is one of the many conferences held every summer throughout the United States, in which valuable topics of international interest are argued. There is every indication that both Milton and Beloit will send large delegations to this meeting. Milton is working doubly hard and is striving for a record delegation from that institution.

What Makes White Spots on Nails.
It is now thought that the white spots which frequently appear on finger nails are due to the presence of gas in the substance of the nail. They occur much more frequently during youth and in women and are usually found in persons of nervous type. There is no remedy for them and no means of prevention except the avoidance of injury to the nails.

Feared for Grandpa.

Walter, aged three, was taken by his grandfather to see a great factory. As they were finishing their tour of inspection his grandfather happened to notice that it was within a few minutes of noon. Taking out his watch, he said:

"Now, Walter, keep your eyes on the hands of my watch and when both of them point straight to the top something will happen."

Walter watched eagerly and just at the minute that the hands came together the great factory whistle sounded a deafening blast.

Walter's eyes danced for an instant, and then an awful fear overtook him. "But, grandpa," he gasped, "what would they do to you if they knew you did that?"

THAT UNLUCKY NUMBER

By WALLACE HORTON.

(Copyright, 1914, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Mrs. Garvin surveyed the dining table with delighted eyes. Certainly there was little to complain of in that daintily conceived decoration for the coming of an honored guest.

Sir John Vance, the great matinee hero and exponent of the drama, was coming in for high tea, together with a notable number of well-known persons. Sunday evening being the only time when theatrical stars were free, Mrs. Garvin had chosen that night for their entertainment.

She fluttered about the table like a small bird twittering over a resplendent flower bed and hoped that nothing would occur to mar the beauty of an expected joyous evening. Mrs. Garvin and her retinue of servants had spent much time and thought over the decorations suitable for an eminent actor, and the result was gratifying at least.

The center of the table was a mass of laurel, and around it were placed fourteen little manikins representing Sir John in various parts through which he had won his fame. The little figures seemed to stroll about the table.

A few moments later the doorbell rang and the first of the twelve expected guests arrived. Sir John Vance followed, and soon all save one of the fourteen visitors were safely under the roof of their hostess. When another quarter of an hour had passed Mrs. Garvin became anxious lest something dreadful had happened to Drina Warden that would prevent her coming and thus upset the entire table arrangement.

Another moment and the telephone rang. Drina could not come and there would of necessity be a vacant place at the table.

Mrs. Garvin sighed. But since there was no chance of getting another guest at that late time she followed her party into the dining room, her fingers resting lightly on the arm of Sir John.

"I wanted Drina Warden especially—to meet you," she told him with dainty flattery in her eyes. "It is her loss, however, that she is unable to be here."

The great actor rewarded her flattery with his whimsical smile.

"I can assure you I was not notified the absence of—anyone," he returned, and Mrs. Garvin blushed prettily. "It cuts our number down to thirteen, though," she said laughingly. "I hope you are not superstitious, Sir John," she added, and was startled by a quick glance he cast over the guests. "But I am," Sir John told her frankly. "I cannot sit down with thirteen at table. The greatest loss I have sustained in my life followed such an occurrence. Do ask some one in; it does not matter who."

Miss Gray, the children's nurse, protested in vain. "You look as sweet as a new-blown rose in that pink blouse," Mrs. Garvin told her.

Enid Gray was flushed and inwardly trembling, as Mrs. Garvin pulled her by the hand into that assemblage of notable people, but outwardly she expressed the calm of a placid lake. The ordeal of presentation was most trying, and only when she was seated beside the guest of honor did she find time to realize that she was not dreaming. He had offered her the flower from his lapel the moment she had seated herself.

"That is for being a good girl," he told her with his delightful smile. "I would have had to miss this high tea Mrs. Garvin invited me to had you not completed our number."

And since the ice had been broken in so effective a manner she proceeded with more merriment than it would have had Drina Warden graced the table with her presence.

Later when the guests returned to the drawing room, each carrying a manikin representing Sir John, Miss Gray would have slipped off to the nursery had not Mrs. Garvin detained her.

"No, no," she commanded, putting a determined hand on that of Enid Gray. "I want you to sing those sweet little lullaby songs you do for the kiddies. Sir John is very fond of music, he tells me, and none of us can sing a note."

When Enid retired to her room that night her eyes were sparkling and her cheeks flushed. She still felt the warm thrill that had swept over her when Sir John had drawn her hand close within his own and the look in his eyes when he had said to her, "I have always regretted my superstition—until tonight. Now—it is a most wonderful asset."

COMMERCIAL LEAGUE STARTED SATURDAY; Y DEFEATS PARKERS

Association Team Outbats Parker's and Win 21 to 16.—Lewis Knitting Company Beats Roundhouse 7 to 8.

The opening of the Commercial League Saturday the Y. M. C. A. team sprang a surprise and defeated the champion Parker Pens in a wild slugfest battle by a score of 21 to 16, and the Lewis Knitting Company defeated the St. Paul Roundhouse squad by the score of 7 to 8, through the effective pitching of Connell, in seven innings.

The Association-Parker Pen game was the best played of the day, as the pen niggers presented an array of players that was formidable, having Scher, Sullivan, Hill and Butters in the infield. The Parkers gained a good lead by swatting Miller, the Y hurler, hard at the start, and in the fourth inning the tally was ten to two against the final victors. Jungblud started for the Parkers. Jungblud was yanked in the seventh, when Heagney was put on the mound to finish. After a start of two runs in the first inning, the association nines kept plugging along, counting at intervals in the seventh inning, when they nosed ahead of the league champs by scoring seven runs, the result of a bombing attack that chased the Parkers from the victory perch and put Jungblud off the mound.

In the eighth inning the Y. M. C. A. lead by four runs and the Parkers were tied, the count through the terrific hitting of Hill, Butters, Heagney and Tommy Sullivan, who were bunched into a dangerous combination. In the ninth inning the Y team led by Caputo and Sullivan, and did not stop until they had the game sewed up with five more tallies. Miller was not in form, pitching poor ball as compared to his usual ability, and both Jungblud and Heagney could not show "stuff" enough to stop the Y team and their war clubs. Lineups:

M. C. A.—French, c; Miller, p; J. Stewart, ss; Henning, 1b; W. Sullivan, 2b; Stuckey, 3b; Koop, 1b; Stewart and D. Stewart, fielders. Parker Pen—McGue, c; Jungblud, Heagney, p; Hill, ss; Nehr, 1b; T. Sullivan, 2b; Butters, 3b; Berger, Heagney, Jungblud and Dewey, fielders.

Roundhouse Defeated. Passed ball by Lewis Knitting company's team, which won 8 to 7, in the opening game, which went for seven innings. Poor support behind the pitcher, the Lewis nine nearly in number of runs. The Lewis put across five runs in the first hit by Connell, which scored three of the runs. The Roundhouse kept coming to the front in the next innings, and in the third scored two runs. Lewis put three across in the fifth and sixth innings.

Lee changed from the pitching mound to the catcher's job in the sixth and the Lewis put across three runs in their half of the sixth. The seventh was scoreless. Lineups: Lewis Knitting Co.—Fineran, c; Connell, p; Mulligan, ss; Brady, 1b; Heagney, 2b; Brown, 3b; Olson, Condon and Swanson, fielders. Roundhouse—Lindley and Lee, c; Lee and Lindley, p; Myers, ss; Neave, 1b; Scanton, 2b; Johnson, 3b; Knopp, Garfield, Lindley and Lee, fielders.

Commercial League Notes. In the last game three double plays were executed. The Parkers stopped the Y team twice by the double killing. The Y nine pulled out of a bad hole when Stewart, short, executed a stab and caught two at second. Jungblud pulled a Morkle play which he attempted to steal third, with Heagney already resting on the sack. Heagney was out at home on the play when he started to steal while Miller held the ball.

Butters got the longest drive of the game, a blast for a slow ball for a triple, scoring two in the sixth. Reddy Enright officiated and is recovering from the effects of the ordeal as well as can be expected. The former Cardinal manager worked the incident in a most satisfactory manner.

The Y and Parker Pen nines appear to be the strongest in the league, and will repeat their old record. William Sullivan will lead the Y in this year, and Tommy Sullivan, a veteran leaguer, will pilot the Parker Pen. Joe Ryan is slated to hold the third sack but for the Y, which will shift Stuckey to the outfield, bracing the team considerably.

The Lewis team will be a factor in the league with Andy Connell pitching with support from Connell, a hard man to beat being one of the best pitchers in the city. Heagney was badly spiked by Connell when the latter attempted to come home on a passed ball from second in the seventh inning. The Parker pitcher having a deep cut in the leg from tagging the runner out in a close play.

Arthur Duffey says: "This is going to be a great season for the Y nines. In fact it wouldn't be surprising if a new quarter mile mark was set up this year. The sprints and the distance runs at present are at a point where the marks will stand for some time, while some of the field events hardly will be touched."

RACINE MERCHANTS IN BIG EXHIBITION

"Made in Racine" Show Advertisers
The Wares of Wisconsin City
in Excellent Manner.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Racine, Wis., June 7.—The barracks which recently housed the biggest religious revival ever held here was a collection of exhibits indicative of an industrial revival when the second "Made in Racine" exposition opened today.

One hundred and fifty local manufacturers have space at the show and the wares were evidence of Racine's claim as the greatest manufacturing city in the United States, in relation to its population. Among the various articles on exhibition were a home electric plant, a wire and telegraph outfit, a shoe factory and a hosiery plant. The educational phase of the exposition was shown in the exhibits illustrating health measures. There was a collection of panels depicting the fight against tuberculosis, as shown recently in the National Conservation exhibition at Memphis, Tenn. The war against flies and mosquitoes also was illustrated.

Wisconsin's ranking as a dairy state was shown in tables, while the working model of a farm and four pure bred cows in a modern stable and milking by electricity, formed a practical demonstration. The educational education exhibit showed the child from the kindergarten to the time he starts out to shift for himself. There was also a collection of civil war relics and other interesting articles from past generations. The exposition will last a week.

PENNANT IS WORTH $140,265 TO CLUB.

Charles W. Mears, who formerly was a baseball writer, opines that the big league manager who can win a pennant is worth exactly $79,104 more to his club owner than the manager who finishes second. Mears writes his opinion in Harper's Weekly. In addition, Mears says the pennant-winning manager is worth $61,161 to his players, making his total money value $140,265 greater than the money value of any other manager. Mears says his figures are based on computations of the average money divided by club owners and players in the last five world championship series.

JANESVILLE DEFEATS DELAVER, SCORE 5-2

CARDINALS TAKE SECOND VICTORY SUNDAY IN WELL PLAYED TILT.

BUTTERS HURLS GAME

Cardinal Pitcher Allows But Three Hits During the Nine Innings.—Scores Counted on Boots.

Stellar pitching by "Cuddy" Butters and good support by the Janesville Cardinals brought victory to the Bowler City nine Sunday afternoon when they took the measure of the fast Delavan City team by the count of five and two. It was sterling baseball all the route, the Delavan aggregation failing to touch Butters except in scattered places and the fielding of the "regular" Cardinals infield was without a counting blow. The Cardinals had to show their full hand to win, but after the second inning they were never in danger of being headed off by the Lake nines. Butters showed the four hundred fans and fanettes, that all he needed was a dose of warm weather with a hurl the Cardinals in condition to average nine. He allowed but three hits during the afternoon's pastime and the Delavan scores came through boots made by a certain gentleman named Erving of Milwaukee, who was supposed to be a ball player. It was only an allegation, for he booted across two scores in the second inning before Nehr was rushed in to plug up the hole and he did a good job of it. Butters had tons of steam in fact he had to apply the safety valve after the sixth session to make the Delavan nines sound and have heart. He fanned ten men and should have covered the Delavan team with the wash stuff but for the costly errors at first.

Hit Quin Hard. Against the Cards was a husky giant, with the prefix of Quin, who is alleged to be a leaguer from the three L's. The Janesville swatmen totaled up twenty hits, two of which doubles, the majority of which helped ring up the tallies on the score board. Calkins, the Delavan pitcher, was the best visiting player, for he gobbled three fouls in the game to the finish, with bunches of "pop."

Both teams failed to reach the initial sack in the first, falling prey to the assail column. In the second inning the Delavan nines were safe of an error by Chamberlain, who dropped an easy fly. Cummings laid one down to first and Erving promptly made himself unpopular by kicking the ball over the fence. With one down and two on, Butters fanned the next batter and then Cummings rolled an easy down the first base line, but the Milwaukee "star" whopped a screamer, hit and allowed two to score when he attempted to make a grandstand stab and never faltered the ball on its flight to the garden. Butters fanned the next man. Exit Erving and enter Nehr.

Tie the Score. The Cardinals tied the count in the third inning when Johnson reached first on a dropped liner to center. Dickinson came through with a sacrifice hit and then Berger choked a sacrifice hit that did the intended work, advancing both runners. Cornell stretched his speed the big second sacker made it a double and two runs counted. Nehr was robbed of a hit by Blodgett at third and the inning ended with brighter prospects on the game.

In the fourth two hits, a sacrifice and a walk, failed to net the Cardinals a run for Calkins led the Delavan boys through the danger by picking a foul from Dickinson's nest. A fence and Berger fanned. Delavan was having trouble with Butters, not being able to hit the ball outside of the diamond. In the fourth two safe blows came in succession with nobody dead. Butters heaved across three fast ones and Cummings took three healthy swings at the thin atmosphere where his bat hit and he was just. He had reason to do such. Johnson made the third out by a spectacular stop of a grounder and Nehr managed to hang onto his bat throw to first.

The Cardinals went ahead in the fifth when Cornell hit, stole second while Nehr was fanning. Chamberlain singled and Cornell leaped it for the diamond. In two safe blows came in succession with nobody dead. Butters heaved across three fast ones and Cummings took three healthy swings at the thin atmosphere where his bat hit and he was just. He had reason to do such. Johnson made the third out by a spectacular stop of a grounder and Nehr managed to hang onto his bat throw to first.

Crank Scores. In the seventh Croak and Cornell bounced off hits to start and Nehr worked for a walk. Croak scored on a long fly by Chamberlain. Hall dumped a punt and Cornell on the squeeze play, was off for the plate like a shot. It was safe off around the bases and three runs counted. The eighth and ninth innings were without thrills and the Cardinals annexed their second victory.

Diamond Dust. In the third inning when O'Neill was at bat he knocked a foul over the stand. The batter busied himself dusting off the plate for Cook's eye when the kid leaved off the ball over the stand. It struck O'Neill on the head, but he never moved. One guess why it did not hurt.

In the fifth when Kellar was going to second, Nehr had a sure fourth play, but his throw struck the runner on the head and both were safe. In the same inning Kellar attempted to score first-time Johnson on a hit to center, but Chamberlain sagged a perfect bounding throw from deep field and Hall had the runner nicely blocked for an out.

Calkins tumbled Chamberlain when the Cardinal pitcher and feller attempted to score, Chamberlain going over his back.

M. Cummings, center fielder for Delavan, made a one hand stop of a fly in the seventh and sustained a few bruises when he fell backward with considerable force. The catch robbed Cornell of a fourth hit.

Hall finished with a perfect batting average, getting two hits and making two sacrifices, in four trips to bat. Cornell was the hitting "kid" of the team before playing with much strength to the Cards. He formed a played with Beloit and Stoughton and is an experienced man.

With Ryan at third, the Cards' infield will be as solid as Johnson showed that he could all third base easily, but the latter needs a new kind of a crease on his bat.

Between "acts" the band gave the players a little inspiration. A new score board has been added to the diamond.

AUTOMOBILE INSTRUCTION
BY EXTENSION DEPARTMENT OF WISCONSIN UNIVERSITY

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., June 7.—"Why is an automobile" was thoroughly explained to more than five hundred Wisconsin people the past winter through the agency of the extension division of the state university. The demand for technical instruction in the construction and operation of automobiles has become so great that preparations already are under way to take care of an enrollment of twice this number when the classes open next fall.

Twenty-two classes were held during the winter at New Richmond, Cumberland, Grand Rapids, Marshfield, Spooner, Ashland, Soldiers Grove, Arcadia, Black River Falls, Oshkosh, Eau Claire, Pepin, Chippewa Falls, Wausau, Milwaukee, La Crosse and Superior.

The course consists of ten lessons and includes practical demonstration work given in co-operation with local garages. The instruction deals particularly with the technical principles of the gasoline engine and the ignition and carburetion equipment. The course has been under the direction of Earle B. Morris, associate professor of mechanical engineering.

CONSTANTINOPLE.

Press dispatches would indicate the "near" success of the allies in their attack upon the Dardanelles. This will of course ultimately mean the fall of Constantinople, and with it the end of the regime of the Turk in Europe and a decided decrease in his power even in Asia Minor. It will mean the cross will fly where the crescent now waves and mass will once more be said in the mosque of St. Sophia. The Christian Science Monitor recently gave a careful resume of the situation in this particular part of the world's stage and it is even more interesting just at this time with a possible victory for the cross reported than when first published. It says in part:

"There is no question which is causing the statesmen of Europe more furiously to think, at the present moment, than the future of Constantinople. When the Germans determined to attempt a decision of the Turks to throw in their lot with them, they accomplished their thing. First, they made the fate of the Ottoman empire a concomitant with their own success. Second, they threw their designs for a great empire in the near east into the scale in which their own and Turkey's fate was in the balance. Third, they flung the apple of Paris into the ranks of the allies. All of which is as true as the sun."

France and the United Kingdom, with the consent of Russia, undoubtedly a very unwilling consent, had offered to guarantee her possessions in Europe and Asia to Turkey in the event of her remaining neutral. The ambition of Enver Pasha, for his country, led him, however, to decline this offer, and to snatch at the prospect of a renewal of the Ottoman dominion in Egypt, offered to him by Berlin. This offer and this acceptance entailed serious consequences for the new allies in the event of failure. Turkey it meant the destruction of her empire not only in Europe, but in Asia; the disappearance of the Caliph from the Golden Horn; and the loss to the Muhammadan faith of Hagia Sophia. For Germany it meant the imposition of a Slavonic barrier between her home territory and her dreams of empire in Asia Minor, and the complete economic severance of the Germanic races from commercial exit to the sea at Salonika. On the other hand it raised a perfect cloud of difficulties for the allies. Russia not only demanded a free passage through the Dardanelles, but the reversion of Constantinople, which neither France nor the United Kingdom were particularly anxious to bestow on her.

France, of course, had a pre-emption on Syria, but the question of the custody of the Holy Places in Palestine raised almost as much strife between the Greek and Roman churches, as the fear of the desertion of the Holy places in Arabia stirred anger and fanaticism in Islam. Other burning questions were torn open at the same time: the question of the islands in which Greece and Italy were mightily concerned, and the subject of Italian aspirations in Anatolia.

"In all this Germany and Turkey were drawing on the bank of future chances. For the allies, however, the question was one which had to be settled forthwith. Russia had snatched at the opportunity so recklessly presented by Enver Pasha. The addition of Turkey to the German forces meant nothing to her one way or the other. What was essential was that she should be driven out of Europe, 'bag and baggage,' to use Mr. Gladstone's historic phrase, and the commands of the Czar Peter's will be fulfilled. At this period it became necessary for the allies to determine their relations to each other in respect to the new factor forced into the quarrel, and terms were reached which will be realized in the event of victory at the end of the war.

"The traditional policy of England and France before and since the Crimean war has been the closing of the Dardanelles in peace to all war vessels of Russia, for the Balkan powers have no navies. In war the straits could, of course, be closed not only to ships of war, but to merchant ships. Russia, however, desired something more than the opening of the straits. She desired the great city on the Bosphorus, the greatest commercial site in Europe, occupying, as it does, the position of the gateway to the east and west. Neither France nor the United Kingdom wanted Constantinople for themselves, but they did wish to insure freedom of trade through this gateway. Still they agreed that Constantinople should pass into the hands of Russia, and at the same time they agreed to the fortification of the straits. Of course the fortification of the straits would no longer have the same meaning as in the past. With Constantinople in the hands of Russia no shipping except Bulgarian and Roumanian could be blocked within the Black sea, but what would happen would be the forming of one of the greatest naval and military stations in the world, with a perfectly secure exit into the Mediterranean and line of retreat from it. In exchange for the surrender of their traditional policy France and the United Kingdom had to receive some equivalent. Egypt was already in the grasp of the United Kingdom, but Russia under took not to oppose demands Downing street might make, and to object to the hoisting of the tricolor in Syria, or to such further compensation as the Quai d'Orsay might require. As a matter of fact Russia would naturally conceive no price too heavy to pay for Constantinople. With this secure, her vast empire would stretch from Behring Straits to the Baltic and from the Kara sea to the Caucasus. Armenia is already as good as hers. The slightest forward step would carry her completely around the Black sea, so that her dominions would extend from the Bosphorus round the Caspian, across Asia to the Arctic ocean.

All these arrangements are necessarily dependent on the crushing of the armies of the man who, if the allies are victorious, will be the last of the Caliphs to have reigned in Constantinople during the 462 years which have elapsed since that May morning, when at sunrise the armies of Muhammad II. sounded their drums and trumpets, and rushed upwards into the breach where the last of the Caesars awaited them. If, when the war is over, the Russian eagle floats over the Golden Horn, the triumph will not be among the least of the disappointments of the Hapsburgs. To hear the Latin mass chanted under the dome of the great basilica has been, for centuries, one of the dreams of the Austrian Kaisers. On the eve of the fall of the city the Grand Duke Nicholas had declared that he would rather see the turban of the Sultan than the tiara of the Pope within the besieged walls. It would seem as if the capital of the eastern empire was destined to return to the faith of that empire."

Now comes the report that Villa has again been decisively defeated, and Carranza is the only real legitimate leader in Mexico. But Villa has not sent in his report yet. Maybe his typewriter is on the bum or his stenographer went on a "pay day" spree.

June roses will not blossom as long as it is mid-summer one day and hot enough for a palm leaf fan and a smile and then jumps to the frigid zone the next.

It is now up to the state senate to see that the retrenchment measures are passed and the campaign pledges of both parties redeemed.

Out of respect for the June brides the would be divorcees should refrain from court action until July at least.

Clean Up. There's no time like today To throw the cans away And polish up the home you've got. You'll find that it will pay. Get up at early dawn And get the weeds all drawn. And from the alley to the street Clean up your place and make it neat. And manure the lawn. The microbes all grow lean In places that are clean. They cannot thrive when you have done your duty. They will cut and run And never more be seen. "Clean up," for that's the cry. Allow no refuse high. So get the rakes and brooms all down And chase the germs all out of town. You'll do it, if you try.

MRS. CHERRY HOOPER DIES OF PARALYSIS

Mother of J. T. Hooper of Blind Institute Succumbs at School Today After Four Weeks' Illness.

After an illness of four weeks' duration, commencing with a slight stroke of paralysis and finally resulting in a complication of disease, Mrs. Cherry Calloway Stevens Hooper, aged 78 years, passed to the world this morning at the residence of her son at the Blind Institute for the Blind. She was the mother of Supt. J. T. Hooper of the school, and had been in the city but two weeks, being cared for at her son's home, and being brought here from her home in Burlington. Her age, coupled with her strength, proved too much for her, despite the best of care that was given her.

The deceased was born in St. Barth, Cornwall, England, March 16th, 1837. She came to America in 1855, and located in Platteville. On November 24th, 1858, she was married to William Hooper of Platteville. In 1862 they moved to Burlington, where they have since resided. Two sons, Walter J. of Gregory, South Dakota, and J. T. Hooper of this city, and a husband, aged 81, who lives at Burlington, survive her.

The deceased was a member of the Episcopal church at Burlington and a devout Episcopalian. Short services were held this afternoon at the institute at 4:30 o'clock. Rev. Henry Williams of Trinity church officiating. The remains were taken to Burlington tonight over the Milwaukee road, where burial will be made.

GENEROSITY IN WAR TIMES

Some Historical Instances Are on Record, Though They Are Not Numerous.

Instances of historical generosity are rare indeed. Of the few of record the following may be briefly mentioned: After the defeat of Pompey's army at Pharsalia Julius Caesar, instead of ordering a general massacre or enslaving of the conquered, issued an order according to every man of his own forces the privilege of ransoming one of the enemy. It was thus that Julius made himself Caesar.

After the fall of La Rochelle the English knights taken prisoners and unable to ransom themselves, were sent under a flag of truce home to England and there set free. The English, not to be outdone, chivalrously restored to the French an equal number of captive knights. From this incident came the custom of exchange of prisoners, so greatly ameliorating war's horrors.

The exchange of kindly courtesies between Grant and Lee after Appomattox furnishes an American instance of the practical value of generous actions.

And another deserves recording: When the great hearted, wise minded Lincoln, reproaching the vindictive of his cabinet who stigmatized playing the delightful air of "Dixie" as "treasonable," said: "Not so; we captured that tune with the other effects of the 'Lost Cause.'"

Domesday Book.

According to Stone's Chronicle the title of Domesday Book arose from the circumstance that the original document was kept in a place in Westminster cloisters called Domus Dei, or House of God.

The Deck Hand.

Charlotte Farnham's friends—her number was the number of those who had seen her grow from childhood to maiden—and womanhood—commonly identified her for inquiring strangers as "good old Doctor Bertie's only," adding, men and women alike, that she was as well-balanced and sensible as she was good to look upon.

She had been spending the winter at Pass Christian with her aunt, who was an invalid; and it was for the invalid's sake that she had decided to make the return journey by river.

So it had come about that their staterooms had been taken on the Belle Julie; and on the morning of the second day out from New Orleans, Miss Gilman was so far from being travel sick that she was able to sit with Charlotte in the shade of the hurricane deck aft, and to enjoy, with what quivering enthusiasm there was in her, the matchless scenery of the lower Mississippi.

At Baton Rouge the New Orleans papers came aboard, and Miss Farnham bought a copy of the Louisianaian. As a matter of course, the first page leader was a circumstantial account of the daring robbery of the Bayou State Security, garnished with startling headlines. Charlotte read it, half-absently at first, and a second time with interest; and when she realized that she had actually been a witness of the final act in the near-tragedy, her little gasp of belated horror brought a query from the invalid.

"What is it, Charlotte, dear?"

For answer, Charlotte read the newspaper story of the robbery, headlines and all.

"For pity's sake! in broad daylight! How shockingly bold!" commented Miss Gilman.

"Yes; but that wasn't what made me gasp. The paper says: 'A young lady was at the teller's window when the robber came up with Mr. Galbraith—Aunt Fanny, I was the young lady!'"

"You? horrors!" ejaculated the invalid, holding up wasted hands of deprecation.

Charlotte the well-balanced, smiled at the purely personal limitations of her aunt's point of view.

"It is very dreadful, of course; but it is no worse just because I happened to be there. Yet it seems ridiculously incredible. I can hardly believe it, even now."

"Incredible? How?"

"Why, there wasn't anything about it to suggest a robbery. Now that I know, I remember that the old gentleman did seem anxious or worried, or at least, not quite comfortable some way; but the young man was smiling pleasantly, and he looked like anything rather than a desperate criminal."

Miss Gilman's New-England conservatism, unweakened by her long residence in the West, took the alarm at once.

"But no one in the bank knew you. They couldn't trace you by your father's draft and letter of identification, could they?"

Charlotte was mystified. "I should suppose they could, if they wanted to. But why? What if they could?"

"My dear child, don't you see? They are sure to catch the robber, sooner or later, and if they know how to find you, you might be dragged into court as a witness!"

Miss Farnham was not less averse to publicity than the conventionalists demanded, but she had, or believed she had, very clear and well-defined ideas of her own touching her duty in any matter involving a plain question of right and wrong.

"I shouldn't wait to be dragged," she asserted quietly. "It would be a simple duty to go willingly. The first thing I thought of was that I ought to write at once to Mr. Galbraith, giving him my address."

Thereupon issued discussion. At the end of the argument the conservative one had extorted a conditional promise from her niece. The matter should remain in abeyance until the question of conscientious obligation had been submitted to Charlotte's father and decided by him.

An hour later, when Miss Gilman was deep in the last installment of the current serial, Charlotte let her book slip from her fingers and gave herself to the passive enjoyment of the slowly-passing panorama which is the chief charm of inland voyaging.

From where she was sitting, she could see the steamer's yawl swinging from its tackle at the stern-staff; and after many minutes it was slowly borne in upon her that the ropes were working loose. A man came aft to make the loosened tackle fast.

Something half familiar in his manner attracted Charlotte's attention, and her eyes followed him as he went on and hoisted the yawl into place. When he came back she had a fair sight of his face and her eyes met his. In the single swift glance half-formed suspicion became undoubted certainty; she looked again and her heart gave a great bound and then seemed suddenly to forget its office. It was useless to try to escape from the dismaying fact. The stubble-bearded deck-hand with the manner of a gentleman was most unmistakably a later reincarnation of the pleasantly smiling young man who had courteously made way for her at the teller's window in the Bayou State Security; who had smiled and given place to her while he was holding his pistol aimed at President Galbraith.

It was said of Charlotte Farnham that she was sensible beyond her years, and withal strong and straightforward in honesty of purpose. None the less, she was a woman. And when she saw what was before her, conscience turned traitor and fled away to give place to an uprush of hesitant doubts born of the sharp trial of the moment.

She got upon her feet, steadying herself by the back of her chair. She felt that she could not trust herself if she once admitted the thin edge of the wedge of delay. The simple and straightforward thing to do was to go immediately to the captain and tell him of her discovery, but she shrank from the thought of what must follow. They would seize him; he had proved that he was a desperate man, and there would be a struggle. And when the struggle was over they would bring him to her and she would have to stand forth as his accuser.

It was too shocking, and she caught at the suggestion of an alternative with a gasp of relief. She might write to President Galbraith, giving such a description of the deck-hand as would enable the officers to identify him without her personal help. It was like dealing the man a treacherous blow in the back, but she thought it would be kinder.

"Aunt Fanny," she began, with her face averted, "I promised you I wouldn't write to Mr. Galbraith until after we reached home—until I had told papa. I have been thinking about it since, and I—I think it must be done at once."

Griswold had come upon Miss Farnham unexpectedly, and when he passed her on his way forward he had seen the swift change in her face betokening some sudden emotion, and the recollection of it troubled him.

What if this clear-eyed young person had recognized him? He knew that the New Orleans papers had come aboard; he had seen the folded copy of the Louisianaian in the invalid's lap. Consequently, Miss Farnham knew of the robbery, and the incidents were fresh in her mind. What would she do if she had penetrated his disguise?

He had a shock of genuine terror at this point and his skin prickled as at the touch of something loathsome. Up to that moment he had suffered none of the pains of the hunted fugitive; but he knew now that he had fairly entered the gates of the outlaw's inferno; that however cunningly he might cast about to throw his pursuers off the track, he would never again know what it was to be wholly free from the terror of the arrow that fleth by day.

The force of the Scriptural simile came to him with startling emphasis, bringing on a return of the prickling dismay. The stopping of the paddle-wheels and the rattling clanger of the gang-plank which aroused him to action and he shook off the creeping numbness and ran aft to rummage under the cargo on the engine-room guards for his precious bundle. When his hand reached the place where it should have been, the blood surged to his brain and set up a clamorous dinning in his ears like the roaring of a cataract. The niche between the coffee sacks was empty.

CHAPTER V.

The Chain Gang.

While Griswold was grappling afresh with the problem of escape, and planning to desert the Belle Julie at the next landing, Charlotte Farnham was sitting behind the locked door of her stateroom with a writing pad on her knee over which for many minutes the suspended pen merely hovered. She had fancied that her resolve, once fairly taken, would not stumble over a simple matter of detail. But when she had tried a dozen times to begin the letter to Mr. Galbraith, the simplicities vanished and complexity stood in their room.

Try as she might to put the sham deck-hand into his proper place as an impersonal unit of a class with which society is at war, he perversely refused to surrender his individuality. At the end of every fresh effort she was confronted by the inexorable summing-up: in a world of phantoms there were only two real persons; a man who had sinned, and a woman who was about to make him pay the penalty.

It was all very well to reason about it, and to say that he ought to be made to pay the penalty; but that did not make it any less shocking that she, Charlotte Farnham, should be the one to set the retributive machinery in motion. Yet she knew she had the thing to do, and so, after many ineffectual attempts, the letter was written and sealed and addressed, and she went out to mail it at the clerk's office.

As it chanced, the engines of the steamer were slowing for a landing when she latched her stateroom door. The doors giving upon the forward saloon deck were open, and she heard the harsh voice of the mate exploding in sharp commands as the steamer lost way and edged slowly up to the river bank. A moment later she was outside, leaning on the rail and looking down upon the crew grouped about the inboard end of the uplitted landing stage. He was there; the man for whose destiny accident and the conventional sense of duty had made her responsible; and as she looked she had a fleeting glimpse of his face.

It was curiously haggard and woe-begone; so sorrowfully changed that for an instant she almost doubted his identity. The sudden transformation added fresh questionings, and she began to ask herself thoughtfully what had brought it about. Then the man turned slowly and looked up at her as if the finger of her thought had touched him. There was no sign of recognition in his eyes; and she constrained herself to gaze down upon him coldly. But when Belle Julie's bow touched the bank, and the waiting crew melted suddenly into a tenuous line of burden-bearers, she drew through the deserted saloon to her stateroom and hid the fatal letter under the pillows in her berth.

That evening, after dinner, she went forward with some of the other passengers to the railled promenade which was the common evening rendezvous.

The "Jenny Jolie" had "tied up" at a small town on the western bank of the great river, and the ant procession of rowing boats was in motion, going laden up the swing stage and returning empty by the foot plank. Left to herself for a moment, Charlotte faced the rail and again sought to single out the man whose fate she must decide.

She distinguished him presently; a grimy, perspiring unit in the crew, tramping back and forth mechanically, staggering under the heaviest loads, and staring stonily at the back of his flo leader in endless round; a picture of misery and despair, Charlotte thought, and she was turning away with the dangerous rebellion against the conventions swelling again in her heart when Captain Mayfield joined her.

"I just wanted to show you," he said; and he pointed out a gang of men repairing a ship in the levee embankment below the town landing. It was a squad of prisoners in chains. The figures of the convicts were struck out sharply against the dark background of undergrowth, and the reflection of the sunset glow on the river lighted up their sullen faces and burnished the use-worn links in their leg-fetters.

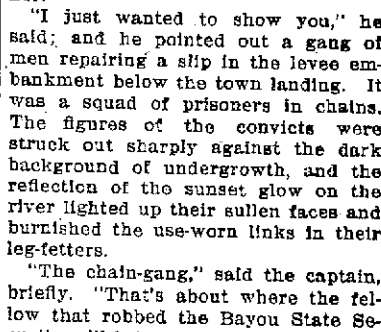

"The chain-gang," said the captain, briefly. "That's about where the fellow that robbed the Bayou State Security will bring up, if they catch him. He'll have to be mighty tough and well-seasoned if he lives to worry through twenty years of that, don't you think?"

But Miss Farnham could not answer; and even the unobservant captain of river boats saw that she was moved and was sorry he had spoken.

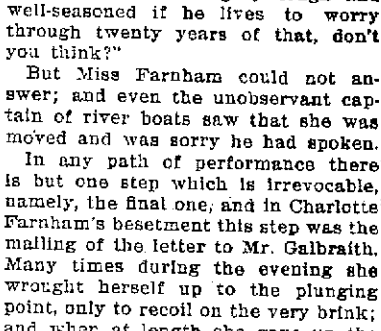

In any path of performance there is but one step which is irrevocable, namely, the final one, and in Charlotte Farnham's besetment this step was the mailing of the letter to Mr. Galbraith. Many times during the evening she wrought herself up to the plunging point, only to recoil on the very brink; and when at length she gave up the struggle and went to bed, the sealed letter was still under her pillow.

"But why not—it's easy enough to say it won't work, but how can you prove it?" demanded Slathers.

"Why, it's simple enough," said Dingleberry. "If it would work it wouldn't be an I. W. W. plan."

"I was sitting on the bootblack's stand," said the story teller, "when the parade came along, the grand marshal riding a big bay horse at its head. Well, just as the head of the parade came opposite me, it stopped. The grand marshal's horse wouldn't go another step."

"Recognized you as his long lost half brother, I suppose," said one of his listeners maliciously.

"Think you're smart, don't you? Well, I'll tell you, anyhow. It was nothing but pride. He wanted his shoes shined."

BOXING FANS "SICK" OF WELSH'S TANGOS

Freddie Will Have to Display More Stuff Than That Ten Round Paper Decision Bout Before He Will Get More Money.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
New York, June 7.—If Freddie Welsh wants to continue to draw down money as a box office attraction he will have to engage in a real fight soon. The public is getting tired of seeing the champion waltz and tango through ten round no-decision affairs.

Welsh hasn't risked his title over the twenty round course to a decision. He has engaged in several bouts since he and Referee Eugene Corri took Willie Ritchie's title in London last summer but they have all been newspaper decision clashes. Welsh has been held even and even shaded in a number of those and the public is beginning to think that the Welshman isn't a real champion by any means.

Ritchie lammed the tar out of the Briton at Madison Square Garden over the ten round route a few months ago. The American made Welsh look like a morose novice, while he had a hard time knocking him out, but Welsh, badly scared, resorted to continual clinching to save himself. He "clung" through the ten rounds. Every New York critic awarded the verdict to Ritchie.

Charlie White, the hard hitting Chicago brawler, has given Welsh several hard tussles over the short course. Jimmy Duffy, the rangy, awkward fighting but hard-to-beat youngster from Lockport, N. Y., is another who is conceded a great chance to beat the Englishman over the twenty round route. Alburn Saylor, inventor of the "loop-the-loop" punch, who hails from Indianapolis, attended Welsh in a Canadian ring a couple of years ago. The Englishman set up a claim of foul and got away with it but there were many who saw the bout who said the Hoosier was robbed of a just victory.

There are a great many others who fence and defensive equipment. It is up to the Englishman to cut loose from the ten round game and get out and defend himself over the long course and to a referee's decision.

Danny Morgan's loose again. The "dumb" manager who spent the most of his time in purchasing a typewriter now breaks forth with the yell that his star lightweight—Jack Britton—can't get fights because he is too good.

That sounds rather odd, but Morgan is handing out real dope for once. Over ten rounds Britton is practically unbeatable. He has crumpled everything set up before him with his heavy blows and regularity. Morgan says he tried to get Leach to fight Britton.

"For why should I fight him when I know I'll get beat," answered Leach, according to Morgan.

The Colonial league saved the national board the necessity of determining its status. Secretary Farrel May 20 that the Colonial would withdraw from protection of organized ball. In a bulletin issued the next day Secretary Farrel announced that the Colonial was out, without going into details as to why. The Colonial is out, as we see it, because it harbors ineligible players, but not, as James O'Rourke says it, because it occupies territory to which another league has rights.

Grover Alexander is the undisputed king of the National league for the season, with eleven in one game and twelve in another. His record of twelve was made against the Cardinals on May 15, and he had such a lead that he took it easy after the fifth inning. Philadelphia critics say that if he had worked his curve ball more he might have made a new famous mark for the major leagues. Of the thirty-five batters who faced him, he hit two strikes on all but eight and hit two hits on the last two. A strike had been called. Alexander is said to be striving for but one record this year—that of winning forty games—and he is taking it as easily as he can when he has a game well in hand.

That none of the prominent British golf professionals will come over to play in the national golf championship at Baltusrol next month is the assertion of Alex Findlay, who recently arrived from England. Findlay managed the tour of Vardon and Ray in 1912 and was to have managed their trip this year. He said that Vardon, Ray, Duncan and the others have given up the idea of crossing the Atlantic and the international element that was expected to make it one of the greatest championships in the history of American golf.

Those Baltimore Feds evidently are having hard sailing. The fact that the Knabe aggregation has failed to come up to expectations, and has been underdog around the bottom of the race all season, has soured the enthusiasm of the few fans that this Maryland metropolis can boast of, and as a result a much greater loss than it did last season. The situation is so desperate that a proposition, in which every citizen of Baltimore is advised to patronize the same at least once during the season. Bureaus with this inscribed are circulated around the town, but there has been little increased work for the turnstiles.

Two Philadelphia lightweights who are showing much class these days are Eddie McAndrews and Jimmy Murphy. Both are youngsters, with boxing ability and a punch. Jimmy is handling Murphy and predicts a great future for his protégé. Murphy's real name is Terry, and he is a descendant of the old timer who won many bouts. When the five rounds fought in a recent Philadelphia show, Phil was the only one to lose and Murphy turned the trick. McAndrews' last win was over Willie Herman, and he showed much class.

Pitcher Jim Scott of the White Sox, undoubtedly the most competent of Manager Rowland's staff, is not having his share of luck this spring. Scott is losing games by the one-run margin on many occasions as a result of lack of hitting by his teammates. The Sox have proved themselves quite a capable hitting club this year, but it has been Scott's misfortune to be on the rubber on several occasions when the team was not hitting, as a result of which he has lost games which ordinarily would have been victories.

Charles Herzog denies that he is descended from an ancient family of Herzegovina, an Austrian province on the battle front.

NEW FORMATION IS TRIED BY GERMANS ON RUSSIAN ARMY

Tactical Formation Like Old Macedonian Phalanx is Successfully Employed by Teutons.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Petrograd, June 7.—For the first time in this war, the Germans in their latest advance into Russian territory have adopted a new tactical formation for attack. The new formation is likened by military experts here to the Macedonian phalanx—composed, not to individuals but of divisions and army corps.

This phalanx, in the advance from Cracow, moved along the line of the Cortice-Rzeszow railway, and included ten full army corps, of which five, forming the main striking lead, were picked troops withdrawn specially for the purpose from the French front.

The phalanx was superabundantly provided with artillery, including a large number of heavy batteries. The latter were also in many cases brought across Germany from the French front. For example, twenty-four battalions of the Prussian Guard Corps had with them forty batteries, half of which were of heavy calibre.

This ancient battle formation, newly applied in modern war, had naturally a tremendous driving force, but it was deprived of any great possibilities of tactical movement by the fact that it was chained to a line of railway, whereby alone it could maintain its supplies and munitions in the quantities required by such a huge concentration.

The rate of movement of the phalanx in a forward direction cannot have exceeded four miles a day, in the opinion of Russian experts. But its momentum was irresistible, and it was this phalanx formation which forced the crossing of the San River at Leczaw. It was assisted by an immense flotilla of aeroplanes.

The Germans, in withdrawing many of their best troops from the French front, allied the gains necessarily left there, with overpowering technical superiority. Thus where the Germans find themselves opposed by a thousand men and two machine guns, they post a hundred men and twenty machine guns, confident that by continuing on the defensive with an extended use of the technical adjuncts of warfare they can safely withdraw their best troops for temporary service elsewhere.

Colonel Colomoff, the best known newspaper military expert in Petrograd, discusses the French position in his latest article. Pressed from two sides, he says, is an elementary principle of coalition warfare. In the fighting of the present month, the Russians have drawn upon themselves enormous masses of first-grade German troops withdrawn from the West front. Naturally the French have tried to reply by putting renewed pressure upon the weakened enemy facing them. But such rapid flanks, extra artillery, and the use of gases, are taking the place of men in the German lines on the West, and for this reason the French attempts at extending pressure have shown no signs of relieving the Russians.

They Know What's Coming.

When a woman opens her remarks with the assertion that of course she's always very careful what she says about anybody, we notice that all the other women prink up their ears and look eagerly expectant.—Columbus (O.) Journal.

ACQUISITION OF HERB PENNOCK GIVES BOSTON RED SOX FIVE LEFTHANDERS

Herb Pennock.

The signing of Herb Pennock of the Athletics by the Red Sox gives the Boston club five lefthanders—Leonard, Collins, Gregg and Ruth being the other four. Whether Pennock will be retained for any length of time remains to be seen, for whenever Connie Mack asks waivers on a youngster it's a pretty good indication that he isn't of major league caliber.

MUST WATCH TIRES

Matter That Means a Great Saving in the Expense of Operating Machine.

NEW DEVICE PUT ON MARKET

Exhibited at Recent Automobile Show in Chicago, It Met With the Instant Approval of Those Who Should Know Its Value.

Nothing could apply to the motorist more than the old saying that "a stitch in time saves nine;" it is particularly applicable in the matter of tire repair and tire care, for tires are more abused and more neglected than any part of a car. The motorist may not permit himself to believe that he is careless and that the high cost of motoring comes to a large extent from inattention to the necessity of first aid to the injured tire.

Macadam roads are apt to have many loose and sharp-edged stones, apparently placed where they will do the most damage possible to a tire tread. They will not cause a puncture or blowout, but they will cause little and big cuts in the tread. Such little cuts do not cause the loss of air, but they make it possible and probable that the fabric will be exposed, and when the tire is submerged in a pool of water the damage has commenced.

In the first place, the water will gradually loosen the fabric, it will separate the tread from the fabric, and will permit sand blisters—the dirt will gradually creep under the tread and expose more of the fabric to the moisture—with the result that in a short time the inner layers of fabric separate and permit a blowout. And a tire that has been permitted to go until this happens is practically worthless.

Heretofore it has been a simple matter to make a good job of repairing a punctured tube, for this does not come in contact with water, but there have not been convenient repair schemes for taking care of a cut casing. One was exhibited at the Chicago automobile show, however, which can be operated from the current of a storage battery or from the electric light circuit in the garage. It was a small affair, in fact, could be carried in a pocket, and was designed to be used for vulcanizing either tubes or casings, and requiring only a few moments to do a permanent job. This is the invention of a Chicago man, well known in motoring circles.

A cut in a casing, for instance, is cleaned with gasoline, rubber is placed in the cut, and the vulcanizer attached in a manner similar to that in the illustration. Then the current from the storage battery is turned on and the job is finished, except a short wait while the vulcanizing is going on. In the meantime the motorist prepares another cut, if there is one, and by the time this is ready the first one is ready to release the little instrument.

The most ingenious wrench ever brought to the attention of a motorist has just been brought out by an Illinois man. The mechanic who tries it will find nothing it will not do for an inanimate thing, for it adjusts itself and tightens itself in a most peculiar manner, and will take either a large or small nut, with no danger of rounding the corners of the nut. One mechanic figured that with several such wrenches in his shop he could easily save from 10 to 15 per cent of the time usually put on a car by a workman, but he did not state whether the owner would be given the benefit of this saving. Ordinarily a motorist carries from three to a dozen wrenches in his tool kit, whereas this one could easily replace at least half a dozen of the set.

Really Tailor's Own Fault.

One reason why some men can't pay the tailor is that they try to follow his directions as to the different clothes required for different hours of the day and haven't time to earn any money.
